MacGuigan Chairman of New Board of Trustees

Announcement of a re-organized and expanded Board of Trustees at Loyola has been made by newly elected Chairman of the Board, Father Gerald MacGuigan, S.J.

The culmination of intensive work and meetings over fourteen months, the announcement came after three days of sessions earlier this month conducted by the Jesuit Fathers at a conference centre near Montreal.

In recent years, Loyola has seen the establishment of a Senate and Board of Governors as well as significant changes in College operations to permit broader participation in the policy and decision-making processes. Changes, however, permitting formal delegation of authority to appropriate areas have required exhaustive examinations of the basic juridical concepts from which the College's operations and aims have been articulated over her 73 year old existence.

The previously announced appointment of Father C.C. Ryan as Rector of the Loyola Jesuit Community was a preliminary step in the separation of authority and duties in the operations of the College and the Jesuit House at Loyola. Under the new organization, Father P. G. Malone continues as President of the College and a member of the Board of Trustees.

In addition to the election of Father MacGuigan as Chairman and expansion of its numbers from seven to fifteen, the Board of Trustees has charted a program for the future aimed at evaluating the structure and operations of the College. The first steps in this program are already in progress. These will involve close consultation with other bodies making up the community of the College – faculty, students, Board of Governors, administration, and alumni.

Priority items on the new Board's program include discussions with the Board of Governors on this body's role in College decision-making and operation. A meeting of the Board of Governors has been scheduled for September 18, 1969. The Chairman of the Board of Governors, The Honourable Mr. Justice Paul Casey Q.C., has invited Trustees to join in this meeting.

The fifteen-man Board of Trustees has, for the first time, brought in members from outside the Loyola Campus. These include Jesuits who are on the teaching staffs of the Universities of Toronto and Guelph; the Academic Vice-President of St. Mary's University in Halifax; as well as two members of the French-Canadian Jesuit Province – Father Irénée Desrochers, editor of the review RELATIONS; and Father R. Picard, Assistant to the French-Canadian Vice-Provincial for Education.

Under the new arrangement, the Jesuit Community at Loyola, the Loyola High School and the College, itself, all become separate corporations each with its own governing body. To achieve this change which was ratified at the three-day meeting, it was necessary to modify some of the general laws of the Society of Jesus.

In order to begin work on a variety of matters currently confronting the College, the Trustees have established standing committees and ad hoc committees and set policies relating to such wide-ranging issues as the Board's own continuing composition; discussions between Loyola and Sir George Williams; the authority of the Board and Senate: future policy and planning; new appointments to staff. In addition to this week's meeting with the Board of Governors, invitations have already been sent to the Student Association Executive, the Faculty Association and a committee of the Alumni Association to meet with the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees at an early date.

Loyola Reforms Constitute Break-Through for Jesuit Order

As a professor and a Trustee of Loyola College I do not attach too much importance to what the Jesuits have done at Loyola during the summer. The governmental reform recognizing the existence of the Trustees as a moral person and a deliberative body is a giant step forward for the Society of Jesus; and certainly the Loyola Jesuits (and Jesuits all over the world who will cite the Loyola precedent) must thank faculty and students for the added pressure during the summer that helped them get the reform accepted. It should have been done long ago, of course. If it had been done, say five years ago, it might well have been a giant step forward for Loyola. Whether it is now anything more than a tiny step remains to be seen.

But even tiny steps can be important. If the reform is accepted in the spirit in which it was made, then annoying ambiguities will have been clarified, distracting issues will have been seen for what they are, and Loyola, (Trustees, administration, faculty and students), can address itself to the central issues that underlie pressing problems. Answers must be given to some key questions. 1) What is a university? 2) Can this first question be answered without an answer to, What is the nature of man (and consequently, of liberty)? 3) Is not the maintenance of the traditional concept of the university against the pressures of thinly-veiled Hegelian and Marxian ideas something that a Catholic university could dedicate itself to?

The evolution of Loyola from Catholic College to Catholic University is not something for educational engineering; a blueprint would be worse than useless. The work must be creative, that is, the goal, or end – in the sense of self-fulfillment – must partly reveal itself in the making.

When Socrates professed not to know the oracle reckoned him a wise man – and the Athenians sentenced him to death.

The oracle is long since silent, and other norms of wisdom have perhaps been accepted. But like any other group, the Board of Trustees, even though (apart from the student member) they are professors, or eligible to be professors, must confess that they do not have final, unamendable answers to the above, and other, questions.

Do I hear somebody preparing the hemlock?

The accompanying on gouvernmental reform at Loyalo was issued by Rev. G. MacGuigan, S.J., following his election as Chairman of the re-organized and expanded Board.

Student Dean Cites Changed Role for Services

In the following article, Dean Shearer outlines the role of the Department of Student Services in meeting the non-academic needs of Loyola's 4,100 full-time students.

The Department of Student Services has grown in proportion to the student population increase during the past ten years. From a one-man office of miscellaneous affairs (lockers, parking, student lounges, etc.), Student Services has evolved into a comprehensive department of twenty staff members devoted to meeting student needs related to academic success.

Research studies show that the depersonalization of the individual student to the point where he is considered only a numbered member of a class contributes to a disproportionate academic failure rate especially among first and second year students. There is simply no one who will sit down with a student to listen to his concerns at a time and at a place convenient to the student. Naturally, there are exceptions in the person of devoted faculty members and administrators; but these are "exceptions", not the rule.

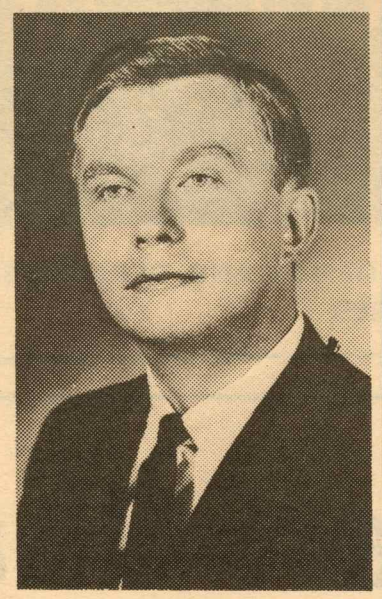
Staff members of the Department of Student Services consider their primary responsibility to be that of meeting with students individually and in groups under circumstances chosen by the students.

At least fifty percent of a student service specialist's time is spent talking with students about whatever the student wishes to discuss in an office, residence room, the caf or a pub. Student needs dictate how our student services deans and specialists spend their time.

When a student service dean is not meeting with students, he spends his time improving those conditions in the campus environment which make student self-development possible. Better food services, more adequate lounges and study areas, well placed bulletin boards, conveniently located lockers, a theatre arts centre, a music listening room, a convenient way to reserve meeting facilities: these are a few examples of the department's efforts to maintain an optimum campus environment conducive to learning.

When a student is preoccupied by a personal problem which he cannot solve by himself, he is naturally unable to devote full attention to his education. To give him immediate assistance in solving his problem, the student may call upon specialists located conveniently on the campus: Health Services including psychiatric consultation, career planning and job placement (a Canada Manpower office), the Guidance Centre, Legal Aid assistance, Financial Aid, student residences for on-campus living, and the Chaplains.

The Department of Athletics and Physical Education has a full time staff of seven professionally trained specialists. The Athletic Complex is open nearly sixteen hours a day and offers a programme of thirty-two activities ranging from intercollegiate varsity participation through intramural team sports to individual activities such as archery and weight-lifting. Loyola boasts of an excellent record of success in its intercollegiate sports competitions with one of the largest percentages of student participation in athletic programmes in North America.



R. Shearer Dean of Students

As is the case with every college and university, we are facing real difficulties in meeting the challenges of social change in our technological society. The Department of Student Services has begun a comprehensive self-study to determine where it must make changes from within if it is to continue to compliment and support the educational purpose of Loyola. By this time next year, you may be reading about the demise of the Department of Student Services and the creation of a new environmental unit called The Student Development Centre.

Summer Renovations Will Help Solve Space Problems

A week ago, a walk through the 3rd or 4th floor of the Administration Building was dangerous – a day later, a few classrooms were set up and some halls were free of hazards designed to trip up even the crews working there – and today, 19 classrooms are completed and ready for the influx of students old and new.

Working against time, innumerable setbacks and the inevitable budget limitations, Loyola's Physical Plant Dept., engineers, contractors and maintenance staff have performed marvels in transforming the former residence of the Jesuit Fathers into functional, attractive classrooms and offices which will help offset Loyola's serious space problems.

Students and faculty using these new facilities will see the surface results of renovations which started in May. Nineteen classrooms with a total capacity for 960 students, with seating ranging from 30 to 110 top the list. Four modern student washrooms and a bright staff lounge are located on the two floors and nine new offices are rapidly being occupied. Sound control has been achieved through the use of carpeting and acoustic tile ceilings – both of which add appreciably to the aesthetic appeal of the two floors.

This is what you'll see – what you won't see (and only staff with offices in the Administration Building can really appreciate after being surrounded by construction throughout the summer) are the new heating and air-conditioning installations; the updated and completely new electrical systems; the fire detection and protection devices and the blood, sweat and tears of all the staff who laboured during the summer to make it all possible.

For a few weeks, there will be minor inconveniences as final finishing is completed. And by November the new elevator will be operating if you lose strength!

The Administration Building renovations are the most dramatic, but not to be ignored are the many other changes throughout the College. Fresh paint is in evidence everywhere, new and converted offices have been provided for the French and Modern Languages Departments in the Loyola-owned duplex on Belmore Ave. Psychology, Theology, Communication Arts and the Evening Division are revelling in the better utilization of their existing space. Even the steam lines in the Drummond Building have been repaired! For those who care to explore, the roof of the Centennial Building has a new look. And, if you think that's all – what about that new furniture or shelving in your office, or the gay picnic tables around the campus – not to mention the new food service areas in the CAF and the Refectory Building?

It's been a productive and busy summer and that last load of blocks that was dropped through the ceiling of our office doesn't hurt a bit – any more –!

Whither the Campus Centre?

It is hard to believe that anyone could have any difficulty spending a million dollars. However, this is partly the problem confronting Loyola regarding the construction of a much-needed campus centre.

In December 1965, the student body of Loyola overwhelmingly voted a $1,000,000 pledge towards the construction of a campus centre estimated then to cost $2,200,000. This pledge was made on the understanding that a matching amount would be provided by the College through its development program.

In 1966, the Loyola Development Program of $17,600,000 was launched. This involved a public appeal for $6,600,000 and the expectation of government grants, pledges have been received totalling more than $10,000,000. Construction and additions to the Loyola campus equal this amount.

Planning of the campus centre has reached the point where construction can begin almost immediately. It has been ready, in fact, for over two years. In June, 1967, the Board of Governors rated it as a priority project.

But still no go-ahead has been received from the Provincial Government despite the fact that the facilities that the centre is intended to provide are sorely needed on this growing campus.

A meeting was held in July between members of the Department of Education and students, led by Marcel Nouvet, President of the Loyola of Montreal Student Association. It was hoped this would, in turn, lead to long-term government financing of the project. The students reported an inconclusive and unsatisfactory meeting that leaves them wondering if anyone really wants their $1,000,000.

Attempts to meet further with government continue. A telegram from the Minister of Education indicated that a further meeting is being arranged with the Department of Education. In the meantime, the students of Loyola would be more than happy to meet with any potential donors interested in matching their $1,000,000 gift.

Any takers?

Ten New Members Elected to Expanded Board of Trustees

For the first time in Loyola's history, Trustees have been elected who are not directly involved in the academic or administrative life of the College. The enlarged Board of Trustees (from seven to fifteen) includes the following members – all of whom are Jesuits and are academically well qualified to assume their responsibilities as Loyola Trustees:

New Members

Rev. I. Desrochers, S.J., B.A. (Montreal), S.T.L. (Immaculate Conception), M.A. (Fordham), Ph. D. (Fordham). An economist who has taught at the University of Montreal and is now editor of the review Relations.

Rev. S. Drummond, S.J., B.A. (Montreal), M.A. (Toronto), Ph. D. (Toronto), S.T.L. (Immaculate Conception). Newly elected Vice-Chairman of the Board of Trustees and Chairman, Loyola Biology Department.

Committees and Their Composition

A number of committees will carry on much of the day-to-day work of the Board of Trustees and make recommendations to the Board or its Executive Committee. Standing committees have been clearly determined and already there are a number of Ad Hoc committees formed... these Ad Hoc committees will be terminated when their particular assignment is completed and others will undoubtedly be added as the need arises.

The Board of Trustees has specified the composition of each of the committees and the recommendations of the Trustees' Nominating Committee for Trustee membership on these committees has already been accepted. In the case of committees which are to include representatives from faculty, staff and students, the Board of Trustees has already written to the particular groups involved inviting them to select their representative according to their individual methods of selection.

The following committees have been formed by the Trustees. . . the names of the nominees are included wherever possible and in all cases the composition of the committee is indicated:

STANDING COMMITTEES

Executive Committee – 7 members

The Chairman, Board of Trustees, Rev. G. MacGuigan, S.J.

Loyola Health Service Equipped and Ready for New Academic Year

Three years ago Loyola's Health Services opened in two rooms with a staff of two and had 1,500 consultations. Today, with eight rooms and six staff members, business is booming. Last year there were over 4,000 consultations in the well equipped Health Services offices in the Centennial Building.

Medical Director, Dr. Alan Powell, a specialist in Internal Medicine, has led this development since the modest beginnings in 1966 and now has a medical staff which includes Dr. Constance Lapointe, also a specialist in Internal Medicine; Dr. D. J. McClure, Psychiatrist; Marg Fraser, Loyola's first college nurse and Miss M. Wheeler, a newly appointed nurse who will join the staff in October. Receptionist, Mrs. Rita Busch, completes the staff.

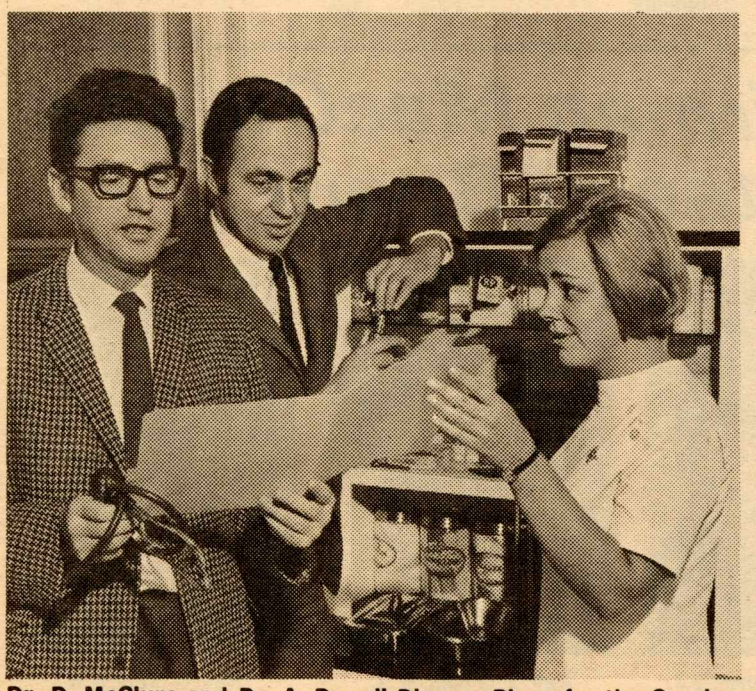
Aside from the general health services of first aid, immunization and preventative medicine, Loyola's medical staff provides students with treatment for acute illnesses and serious injuries – both in and out of hospital. Where treatment is required by surgeons, opthomologists, dental surgeons, etc., students are referred to a specialist of their choice. Psychiatric consultation is available for students with personality problems or anxiety states – many of which develop when an individual is having difficulty relating to the university environment or is feeling the pressure of studies. Psychological disorders are also treated. These are frequently precipitated by the ingestion of hallucinogenic substances.

The Health Services medical team is, in addition to providing direct medical and psychiatric treatment, continuously working in an advisory capacity with the Chaplains and Guidance Counsellors. Faculty and staff are encouraged to refer to the Health Service students whom they feel might benefit from medical or psychiatric consultation. As in all medical practice, consultations with our doctors or nurses are completely confidential.

But a referral is not necessary! Any student feeling the need for advice or treatment by the doctors or nurses may go to Health Services weekdays between 9:00 A.M. and 5:00 P.M. A nurse is always on duty, and at least one of the three doctors is in the office each day. All are on call for emergencies demanding immediate treatment.

Loyola's Health Service has been developed primarily for students. However, faculty and staff are not excluded and may receive first aid care and normal immunizations such as flu vaccines.

All of this sounds terribly cold, clinical and costly! Not so. The services are free for all students and one visit will dispel any thoughts you may have about the "squares" who occupy the offices. The motto of our medical staff must surely be "Laugh and be Healthy" – if one is to judge by the congenial atmosphere which permeates Loyola's Health Service. Try it – it doesn't hurt at all!



Dr. D. McClure and Dr. A. Powell Discuss Plans for the Coming Year in Student Health Services with Loyola Nurse Miss M. Fraser

High School Addition Will Release Facilities for College Use

The latest new building to rise on the Loyola campus is a $300,000 addition to the Loyola High School. This is an interim step in a program aimed at the eventual construction of a new school building on property purchased for that purpose in Cote StLuc some years ago.

In recent years the High School, with a relatively fixed enrolment of 600 students, has been on the losing end of a battle with the burgeoning College registrations for space in existing buildings. Few people recall that until recent years it was the High School enrolment that dominated the campus. In 1955 when College registration was merely 400 the High School enrolled 600 students. How things have changed!

The decision to build was dictated by the inadequacy of existing facilities to serve the current high school enrolment. No increase in this student body is planned.

Construction began in June and it is expected that the High School will have full use of the new facilities by the end of November. In addition to badly needed classrooms, there will be expanded library space and a separate High School cafeteria in the new building.

Under the terms of the recent Private Schools Act there is no provision for government assistance to meet capital needs. As a result, parents of the High School students have agreed to a voluntary assessment which will finance the construction of the addition and permit immediate release of space in the Refectory Building to the College. As soon as funds are available the High School plans to move to its new site. When this occurs, the College will acquire the High School facilities on campus for its own growing needs.

Announcements

Father President has announced that a reorganization of the Committee on Academic Rank and Tenure will be undertaken early in this academic year. It is planned to consult with faculty on the possibility of making CART simply of court of appeal so that recommendations concerning Appointment, Rank and Tenure would, in the first instance, be the responsibility of the individual academic department with review by the Dean and Vice-President, Academic.

Mr. Albert Ferrari, Vice-President, Administration has been on loan (part-time) as Acting Vice-Rector, Administration to the University of Quebec where he has assisted in the development of financial and administrative policies and procedures. His temporary agreement with the University of Quebec terminates at the end of September.

FOOD SERVICE

A new faculty and staff dining room has been opened in the East Dining Room of the Refectory Building. Cafeteria service for meals and snacks will be available weekdays from 8:00 a.m. – 7:00 p.m. Table and buffet service will be available from 11:00 a.m. – 2:00 p.m. Complete and reasonable food service will be provided with a selection of hot and cold meals, sandwiches or snacks.
